Guidelines for Assessing your Skill Level

(with permission, modified from Sorrento Bluegrass Camp guidelines)

Beginner: You have a few basic skills. You can strum, pick or bow, and change basic chords slowly but have little experience playing with others. If you are brand new to playing an instrument, some lessons to get a few basics down will greatly improve your experience at camp.

Intermediate: You can generally keep rhythm and play a few basic melodies in slow jams. You know some basic chord shapes and have some understanding of what chords are common in a few keys. You may be beginning to sort out fingerpicking and flatpicking. You are competent with basic chords: A, Am, B7, C, C7, D, Dm, E, Em, G, and G7. You can sing and strum at the same time easily and learn chords to simple tunes fairly quickly.

Advanced: You have no problems with an F chord, you can hear I, IV, and V chords and usually recognize a circle of fifths. You can fingerpick, play a few tunes smoothly and usually learns from friends or tablature. If you make own arrangements they are usually fairly simple, with an alternating bass line or a few bass runs. If you are flatpicking you can play a few melodies smoothly clear through and may be starting to improvise leads. You know there is life above the fifth fret and have been there with barre or four-finger (partial) chords. You can keep a steady rhythm.

Vocals: There are no prerequisites.
